Trucks of Art: Request for Expressions of Interest (RFEI)

Art Challenge to Paint Collection Trucks with Zero-waste Materials

The NYC Department of Sanitation (“DSNY” or “the Department”) is seeking volunteer artists for Trucks of Art, a public art project to transform 46,000-pound collection vehicles into roving works of art. These heavy-duty machines offer nearly 400 square feet of “canvas,” and artists may leverage the trucks’ sides, front and back in their works.

The proposed artworks selected for Trucks of Art will honor New York’s Strongest, the workforce that keeps New York City clean, safe and healthy, and will highlight the importance of keeping New York City clean – while adding a bit of flair to neighborhoods as DSNY serves them. Because the Department encourages New Yorkers to send zero waste to landfills, artists are challenged with utilizing paints that would otherwise be discarded or recycled.

In selecting the artists who will participate, DSNY will prioritize proposed designs that celebrate DSNY’s Essential Workers or encourage New Yorkers to keep our streets clean by using litter baskets and recycling. To generate further public attention to the works of art, to the artists and to the DSNY workforce, the Department’s non-profit partner, the Sanitation Foundation, may opt to re-produce the final artworks.

This is the Department’s second Trucks of Art program. Learn more about the 2019 Trucks of Art here.

Project Overview

- DSNY will review submissions and select artists, ideally from each borough.
- This is a voluntary project. Artists will not be paid, will retain rights to their designs, and shall give DSNY and the Sanitation Foundation the right to reproduce the designs. (Additional information below.)
- Participants will each be provided workspace, paint and tools. Vehicle painting experts will be available to provide guidance.
- Types of paints will vary dramatically, from donated household latex paints to spray paints. No colors or types of paints are guaranteed.
- Designs must be flexible to accommodate small areas of the truck that may not be painted.
- Each artist will have three 7-hour workdays to paint a collection vehicle.

- The trucks will be unveiled at a media event led by DSNY and will be on display for the public before they are assigned to routes.
- The artwork will be sealed with a clear coat and will remain on trucks for as long as the design withstands the elements.

At its sole discretion, DSNY will select artists. Priority will be given to artists whose designs clearly encourage keeping New York City clean or honor our workforce. DSNY may partner with an outside organization to promote this project and/or select artists.

Ownership Rights

Artists will retain ownership rights of their designs and will have the right to re-create their designs commercially. By participating in Trucks of Art, artists grant DSNY and the Sanitation Foundation the royalty-free, non-exclusive right to use and/or reproduce the designs for non-commercial and/or educational purposes. Should the Foundation choose to use the designs commercially, the Foundation and artist will enter a separate licensing agreement.
